General Information

SHIPPING INSTRUCTIONS

We begin shipping Peony roots about September 10th and continue until the ground freezes.

SIZE OF PLANTS

We never have sent out so-called one-eye divisions. We know from our own experience and admit that these small divisions will, in time, make just as good plants as the larger divisions. It takes at least one year additional time to develop them, and we believe the average grower will be far more likely to succeed and will be better satisfied with the results if standard three to five eye divisions are planted. The plants on which prices are herein quoted are three to five eye divisions, or, roots grown one year from such divisions. This should be borne in mind when comparing our prices with those of other growers.

GUARANTEE

We guarantee all plants sold by us to be true to name and should any of them prove otherwise, we will, at any time within three years from date of invoice replace such plants without additional charge.

TERMS

Cash with order, or before shipment. No account opened for less than $3.00. We do not prepay transportation charges.

TIME TO PLANT

While Peonies may be safely planted at any time after September 1st and before the ground freezes in the fall, the best time to plant is from September 15th to October 15th, as by planting them at that time they will make a little root growth before winter and most of them will bloom the following spring, thereby, a whole year will be gained. We like to have our entire planting completed by October 15th if possible.

CAUTION

After being transplanted Peonies will very seldom produce typical blooms the first season; many fine double varieties producing only single or semi-double bloom and it is usually not until the third year after planting that the finest flowers are produced. Customers planting Peonies should remember this and not be disappointed if the blooms do not reach their expectations the first year.

CULTURE

Nothing will more richly pay for good care and cultivation than Peonies. In planting, place them so that the topmost eyes or buds, will be about two or two and a half inches below the surface of the ground and if they are to be planted in a permanent bed give each plant about twelve square feet of space. If barnyard fertilizer is used in connection with planting it should be well rotted and thoroughly incorporated with the soil, being careful not to place the roots in immediate contact with fertilizer. It might also be well to cover them with a mulch of straw or leaves to a depth of three or four inches during the first winter. This would especially be beneficial if planted in clay soil.

RATING

The most constructive and helpful work of the American Peony Society has been the publication of the Symposium of votes by its members upon the merits of all the varieties in general cultivation. A vote of 10 points means that the variety is perfect, 9 points nearly perfect, 8 points extra good, 7 points good. The figures prefixed to the name of each variety that has been voted upon represents the average of all the votes on the variety. Where ratings have been omitted, the variety either did not receive twenty votes, or no vote has been taken.
